

The faculty of regional and environmental sciences at the University of Trier is looking to fill following position:

W1-Professorship for Human Geography (Urban and Regional Transformations)

In accordance to "Beamtenverhältnis auf Zeit". A Tenure-Track option towards a permanent W2 Professorship is available

As a Professor in Human Geography, you will provide leadership in both research and teaching. Your research expertise should be in the realm of urban and regional transformation and sustainable development. Experience in both empirical research and conceptual/theoretical debates are required. Candidates should have an excellent track-record in geographical debates that span across space and politics, proven through international publications and the proven ability to successfully acquire funding through research grants or third-party sources. The candidate is expected to work closely with the Governance and Sustainability Lab at the University of Trier. Teaching will include Lectures and Seminars in Human Geography for Bachelors and Masters of Science and education for degree seeking students. The Master's program "Environmental Sciences", which is taught in English, might also be part of the teaching.

The ability to, and experience in teaching on a university level is required, and proof of such is expected to be provided by candidates in their application. Interdisciplinary teaching and research methods is beneficial to candidates in the selection process. For more information about formal employment conditions, please refer to § 55 Hochschulgesetz Rheinland-Pfalz.

The selection process will be conducted in accordance to § 49 and § 54 Hochschulgesetz Rheinland-Pfalz. Exemplary educational and research skills are required and proof of such is to be provided by the candidates.

The professorship will be awarded (according to § 55 HochSchG) for three years, with an extension for another three years, if the interim evaluation has been successful. Following this, a permanent W2-professorship is foreseen (Bes. Gr. W2 LBesG), if the holder of the professorship proved to be successful in an internal evaluation process and if she/he meets jurisdictional requirements. See § 50 Abs. 5 Satz 3 HochSchG.

Rheinland-Pfalz and the University of Trier represent an educational concept which highlights the importance of advising and supporting students. Thus, we expect a high personal presence at the university campus. The University of Trier would like to encourage women to submit their applications, in accordance to the University's effort to increase the number of women in research and teaching positions. Persons with disabilities will be considered with preferred status in the application process.

Candidates' applications must be written in English, a very good command of the German Language is however necessary. Expected are a resumé (CV), academic certificates (Diploma, etc.), a list of publications (sorted by reviewed and unreviewed), a list of presentations (sorted by invited and contributed), a list of previous teaching activities (including evaluations), a list of the five most relevant papers, and lastly, a description of current and future research concepts.
